

YOU CAN HELP SAVE THE STURGEON

Join us for fun in the sun and golf for a good cause!

Saving Sturgeon is Vital

Almost all of the world's sturgeon species are endangered, threatened, near extinction, or extirpated -which means they no longer exist.

Support Sturgeon for Tomorrow

From the time the dinosaurs roamed the earth, sturgeon were swimming the waters of the world. For 136 million years sturgeon adapted and survived many changes to their environment. Yet, in less than one sturgeon's lifetime, humans have brought this prehistoric fish to the brink of extinction. You can help.

Research, Habitat, & Conservation are Imperative

The conservation of these important fish will require an integrated and collaborative research approach through field and laboratory studies. Rehabilitation and recovery programs will provide high quality and innovative research on sturgeon biology, habitat conservation, management, and hatchery technology for enhancement and restoration. This research will aid in conserving and restoring the sturgeon populations throughout the Cheboygan River Watershed.

Streamside Rearing/Hatchery Needs

There is revolutionary potential for development of stream-side aquaculture production. Sturgeon For Tomorrow, the Michigan DNR, the Tower-Kleber Limited Partnership and University researchers have opened a streamside rearing facility/sturgeon hatchery near the Kleber Dam. We will be rearing lake sturgeon, conducting culture research on native sturgeon species in the areas of husbandry, nutrition, health, reproduction and genetics.
